Why English Language?

Though the English language doesn't have the largest number of native speakers in the world, it has the widest reach of any language spoken today. The importance of English Communication is to communicate effectively. It is natural that the demand for communication is high in this ever changing world. English plays a crucial role in communication and is no doubt the foremost and most important tool of communication all over the world. Individually everyone should strive hard to acquire very good communication skills which are the most important prerequisites to excel in one's career.

The main purpose of English is to get command over the communication skills, everyone including native speakers makes mistakes. Without an error no true learning can take place. Since language learning is a slow and continuous process, errors are inevitable. The importance of English as a communicative tool is not completely realized by all of us. English empowers young minds not only in passing exams but in demonstrating our acumen before the world. English is no more confined to classroom learning alone, it has been used as a measuring rod in most of the fields. With the advancement of technology, English serves as a facilitator. Children of today become acquainted with computers and internet as exposure in English. It is true that English has empowered Indian youths. The impact of English is not only continuing but increasing. By using English one can become a citizen of the world almost naturally.

We also can make use of English to promote our world-view and spiritual heritage throughout the globe. Swami Vivekananda established the greatness of Indian view of religion at world conference of Religions Chicago in 1893 addressing the gathering in impressive English. Many spiritual gurus have since converted thousands of English people to our spirituality by expressing their thought and ideas in masterful English. English has thus become an effective means of promoting Indian view of life, and strengthening our cultural identity in the world. So, we must make the best use of English language to develop ourselves culturally and materially to compete with the best in world of mind and matters.

Birth story of lord Ganesha

There are two mythological stories about Ganesha.

A story says that Parvati had made a boy out of the dirt of her body, since she was cursed that she could not have a child again. The boy of dirt became alive. This boy was guarding the way while Parvati was taking a bath, as Parvati told the boy to guard the place and didn't allow anyone to come in. Shiva wanted to meet his wife, Parvati. The boy did not allow him. Shiva became angry. He cut off the head of the boy. Then as Parvati came out and exclaimed that this was her son, and Shiva sent his men to look for a human head in the forest to replace Ganesha's. His men brought him an elephant head. Then, the head of an elephant was fixed to make the boy alive again. Therefore, Ganesha has the head of an elephant.

World Ozone Day

Every year on September 16, the World celebrates the World Ozone Day or the International Day for the Preservation of the Ozone Layer.

What is ozone?

Ozone is a gas made up of molecules that are formed by three oxygen atoms. Its molecule formula is O_3 . Ozone is formed when the sunlight hits oxygen molecules (O_2) and breaks them up into individual atoms. These individual atoms then join up with O_2 molecules and make O_3 , or ozone.

What is the ozone layer?

Way up high in the Earth's atmosphere, called the stratosphere, there is a fairly high concentration of ozone molecules that are formed when the sun hits oxygen molecules. This part of the atmosphere is called the ozone layer.

Why is the ozone layer important?

Ozone molecules in the atmosphere provide us with important protection from the rays of the sun. Specifically, these molecules are good at absorbing certain ultraviolet rays that can cause sunburn and skin cancer.

How is the ozone layer getting damaged?

It turns out that certain types of molecules can cause a chemical reaction when they come in contact with ozone molecules. This causes the ozone to break up and become unable to absorb ultraviolet light. The main molecules that are destroying the ozone layer are called chlorofluorocarbons or CFCs.

What can we do about it?

There isn't much we can do about the CFCs that were released prior to the ban, but there are some things we can do:

- Old refrigerators - If you have a refrigerator made before 1995 it probably uses refrigerant made from CFCs. Get a new refrigerator and be sure to have the old one disposed of properly.
- Air conditioning - Old air conditioners, made before 1994, typically used a CFC called Freon. If you still have one of these, it's time to get rid of it and buy a new one. Even newer air conditioners use chemicals called HCFCs. Even though HCFCs are better for the ozone, they still contribute to the depletion, so try and use as little air conditioning as possible.
- Foam - A lot of foam products contain CFCs. Try and use different packing materials such as crumpled old newspapers.

Importance of Literacy

“ Literacy is a bridge from misery to hope”

— Kofi Annan

The “International Literacy Day” is celebrated on 8th September of every year. Reading is so important in today’s fast paced society. All children start with reading, writing and learning how to identify letters on a page. Without this basic skill everything else become too difficult for them to achieve.

Now-a-days our Indian Government has been taking literacy drives all over the country. They are sending teachers into remote corners of the villages of India to educate the people.

For spreading awareness on this, different types of methods have been used:

1. Street plays,
2. Drama through local theatre,
3. Puppet shows and etc...
